Overview

Since the COVID-19 pandemic began, we have gained a deeper understanding of the extent to which we are interconnected. We collectively made sacrifices and adjustments in our lives to mitigate COVID-19 infections to safeguard the health of ourselves, family members, members of our community, and strangers. Our personal sacrifice benefited all of Minnesota by decreasing the number of projected deaths and infections, but we also witnessed mental health disorders resulting from isolation, stress, and poor coping strategies. Finally, we also grappled with our status as ground zero for a social uprising watching Minnesota become more well known for division and unrest than home of several Fortune 500 companies, 10,000 lakes, theater, and innovate health care.

We are convening the community of physicians, professionals, and neighbors to rebuild, restructure, and reimagine the Minnesota mental health system. We intend to discuss mental health access and treatment in the context of external factors such as housing, legal barriers, education, and media. These factors known as the social determinants of health will be integrated into every discussion just as our patient's health is amalgamation of all of these factors. To achieve this goal, members of the Program Committee designed an educational program focused on building a strong mental health community based on collaboration with each other, stakeholders, and advocates.

Educational Objectives – At the end of the educational activity, the learner will be able to:

- Describe effective engagement strategies and essential elements of clinical care for optimal outcomes for psychiatric patients in marginalized, underserved, culturally diverse communities.
- Examine longitudinal impact of multiple biases on health care infrastructure, access, and innovation.
- Assess best practices for improving health care provider educational and professional diversity and opportunity.
- Formulate ways health care providers can redefine their role in terms of public health outreach and education.
